Proposition: A pregnant resident physician should be excused from training rotations such as angiography and nuclear medicine because of the potential exposure of the fetus

OVERVIEW

It has been reasonably well documented that a pregnant resident physician can assume radiology rotations, including higher-exposure rotations such as angiography and nuclear medicine, without exposing the fetus to radiation levels that exceed national and international guidelines. Hence, many medical physicists support the contention that rotations should not be altered because a resident is pregnant. On the other hand, many if not most physicists subscribe to the ALARA (as low as reasonably achievable) principle, especially in cases of fetal exposure where increased radiation susceptibility is combined with an inability to decide for oneself. In addition, altered rotations usually can be accommodated by swapping rotations with other residents, with the pregnant resident taking high exposure rotations after delivery of the child. Policies on this issue vary among institutions, possibly because medical physicists have not come to closure on the issue. This issue of Point/Counterpoint is directed toward that objective.

Presbyterian Hospital (Columbia-Presbyterian Center). Dr. Nickoloff is board certified by the ABR, ABMP, and the ABHP, and a Fellow of AAPM, ACMP, and ACR. His research interests include image quality assessment, quality control, radiation dosimetry and radiation shielding, physics instrumentation and technical aspects of CT/mammography/digital systems.

Arguing against the Proposition is Libby F. Brateman, Ph.D. Dr. Brateman has been a medical physicist for 25 years in private, government, and university-related hospitals and at the former BRH. As a member of the AAPM Radiation Protection Committee, she has championed reasonable radiation protection regulations for x-ray workers at both state and national levels. She is Associate Professor of Radiology at the University of Florida College of Medicine. A member of the ACR Committee on Mammography Physics, she is a five-year breast cancer survivor. As the first adult ventilator survivor in her Bone Marrow Transplant Unit, she understands the dangers of emphasizing statistics in predicting health outcomes for individuals.

FOR THE PROPOSITION: Edward L. Nickoloff, D.Sc.

Opening Statement

Radiation protection criteria for the human fetus are based upon risk estimates derived from limited data on atomic Arguing for the Proposition is Edward L. Nickoloff, D.Sc. Dr. Nickoloff received his Doctor of Science Degree with Distinction from The Johns Hopkins University in 1977 after which he served the Department of Radiology at Johns Hopkins as Acting Director of Physics and Engineering. Currently, Dr. Nickoloff is Professor of Clinical Radiology and Chief Hospital Physicist at Columbia University P&S and the New York-

She evokes a childhood that has completely defined her. A shot echoes like a whip whip and it falls. That's the sound I hear while my family hates each other in the kitchen, the lights out, hidden from the feds that surrounded the house. A woman takes a glass of water and her silhouette is lit by the moon. "I have a few cents in my bag," she said. Grandma thought we should be at school and not, as she said, "going down the mountain as savages." Papa said that public school was a government manoeuvre to keep the children away from God. Your journey will surprise and inspire men and women. That was to distinguish her from our mother's mother, who we call a grandmother-in town because she lived fifteen miles south, in the only city in the county, which had a single light and a supermarket. The baby makes no sense - I am the youngest of the seven children of my mother - but, as I said, none of this happened. They will be all the feeling you had. "Grandma had a lean and angular face and a plethora of fake Indian jewelry, all silver and turquoise, which hung into pieces of her neck and fuse fingers. Because she lived on the hill of the hill of the Us, near the road, we call her grandmother down. . "I can also surrender my children to the devil himself," he said, "while they send them on their way to school." God told his father to share the revelation with the people who lived and cultivated in the shadow of Buck Peak . He started with his cousin Jim, who heard well-naturally while his father waved his Bible and explained the pecaminosity of milk. "Educated: The Memoir" free download pdf book By Tara Westover is a report of the struggle for self-invention. It was when Tara also decided to extinguish her thirst for knowledge and become. Read the following "On the contrary, somehow managed not only to capture his insurmountably exceptional education, but to make his current situation seem not so exceptional, and resonant to many others."— The New York Times Book Review "Westover is a sharp and honest guide to the difficulties of filial love, and to the delight of embracing a life of mind."—The New Yorker " An incredible, truly inspiring story. In the summer she guided herbs to her mother, a midwife and curator, and in the winter she saved on her father's rail. Her father banned hospitals, so Tara never saw a doctor or a nurse. She left her family of survival at a very young age and later, she managed to earn a respectable doctorate from the prestigious University of Cambridge. The book soon after its publication became immensely popular. Jim smiled, then clapped daddy on the shoulder and said that no righteous God would deprive a man of homemade strawberry ice cream in a hot summer afternoon. "But if you ask, the Lord will tell you!" When Dad read his verse to his mother, she laughed in his face. In it, Westover has surpassing his surviving Mormon family to go to college, and emphasizes the importance of education to enlarge his world.383 printed pages Original publication year2021 Publication year2021 Perfect in your generations My feet don't touch Earth anymoreman, disobedient sky What we whisper and what we shout A woman fighting in a wide house Chapter 1 Choose the Good My strongest memory is not a memory.
